

The state transition can be defined either in the Context (1) or State (2). The “request” and “handle” messages are captured as method invocations, while the “changeState” message is captured as a field modification.